MacGillivray Freeman Films and The Weather Channel Sign Multi-Million Dollar Sponsorship Deal for "HURRICANE ON THE BAYOU"

Original Giant Screen Film About Louisiana's Vanishing Wetlands and the Effects of Hurricane Katrina
Opens December 22 in Select IMAX® Theatres Worldwide

Laguna Beach, California, November 1, 2006—MacGillivray Freeman Films today announced a multi-million dollar sponsorship agreement with The Weather Channel for the company's original giant screen film Hurricane on the Bayou, premiering in select IMAX theatres worldwide on December 22.

As the presenting sponsor of the film, The Weather Channel will leverage its multi-faceted media network to create a co-branded promotional campaign for the U.S. release of the film, including a multi-million dollar advertising campaign with national and local TV spots on The Weather Channel, extensive on-line promotions that leverage the position of weather.com as one of the top-five news, entertainment and information web sites in the world, premiere events, a national publicity campaign, and cross promotions with local cable affiliates. The promotion is expected to generate more than 58 million impressions.

"The Weather Channel is the number one name in town when it comes to severe weather reporting and we are delighted to be partnering with them in such a major way for the release of Hurricane on the Bayou," says Greg MacGillivray, President of MacGillivray Freeman Films. "The marketing and promotional support they can provide through their extensive media channels will translate into increased viewers for the film and enhanced performance at the box office."

"Hurricane on the Bayou is a film with a clear message regarding hurricane impact and the importance of key environmental issues," said Lynn Brindell, Senior VP of Marketing at The Weather Channel. "We look forward to working with MacGillivray Freeman Films to further educate the public and drive awareness of the film with the power of The Weather Channel brand."

Narrated by Meryl Streep, Hurricane on the Bayou brings into focus the startling loss of Louisiana's wetlands both before and after Hurricane Katrina. Told through the stories of four musicians whose lives were deeply affected by the storm, Hurricane on the Bayou is both a haunting document of Katrina's powerful effects and a compelling message of hope for rebuilding Louisiana's coastline as its first line of defense against future storms. The film is produced and distributed by MacGillivray Freeman Films with Executive Producer Audubon Nature Institute and in association with MacGillivray Freeman Films Educational Foundation.

A 24-hour, 7-day television network devoted entirely to weather and available in 91 million homes, The Weather Channel is the ultimate source of weather reporting with news outlets now spanning several mediums. Its web site receives more than 25 million unique visitors each month and is consistently rated in the top five for news, entertainment, and information web sites by Media Metrix.
